Presentations and Visits

[ ] PAO Presentations Officer, participated as a discussant in a two-hour panel series on "Democracy in the CIA" held at the American Political Science Convention in Washington on 1 September. Papers were presented by John Elliff, SSCI, on the history of Congressional oversight of CIA, and by Professor Harry Ransom of Vanderbilt University questioning the efficacy of past and existing mechanisms for accountability by the Agency. Elliff rated current mechanisms and their operations as effective; Ransom said they weren't. Morton Halperin, another participant, while criticizing FBI domestic investigations of political organizations, avoided his customary condemnation of CIA covert activities. [ ] described the internal, executive and legislative branch controls over the Agency as the most extensive of any intelligence organization in the world. The discussion which followed was benign--low key and innocuous. Two academicians came forth to request similar participation by the Agency in the March 1985 convention to be held in Washington by the International Studies Association.
